THE weather is hot in Georgia, but it is hotter in the northern cities, as a glance will show. July and winter were never brought closer together than they have heen this year.

THE Georgia press association warmly indersed the cotton exposition and further showed their appreciation of the session at the copanion building on the 6th of October. We predict that this meeting will be one of the most interesting of the exposition period.

THERE is a good deal of sick ness in the city-much of it being of a dangerous nature, and every bit of it traceable to filth and neglect. The city authorities are strangely negligent in the matter of yards of filth and foul smells. THE CON-TITUTION does not propose to handle this subject gingerly. The people are entitled to a clean, wholesome city: they pay heavy taxes to secure a place in which they and their children can live without ring unnecessary risks of disease: and we propose to present the situation just as it is. The want of sanitary precautions is now very pressing but a few days of well-directed labor and supervision would put the city in a condition that, if maintained, would defy disease Death of Dr. Henry Hull.

Yesterday's issue of THE CONSTITUTIO announced the death of Henry Hull, a-"word," and whose "place" will ever be 'known," but never filled in Athens. Dr. Hull was born in Washington, Wilkes county, Georgia, October 20th, 1798. He was the eldest son of the Rev. Hope Hull who with his family moved to Athens in was opened under President Meigs. Dr. Hull spent his entire life in Athens from early boyhood, and died May 10th, 1881 in his 83d year. He was twice married his first wife was Miss Bacon, and his second wife, Miss Mary Nisbet. He was graduated at the State university in the class of 1815. He attended led tures in Baltimore one session, and practiced medicine in Athens until 1830. He received the degree of M.D. from the medical college of Georgia in Augusta as an honorarian in his old age, long after he had retired from the practice. He was elected a trustee of the state university in 1825, and resigned in 1829. Dur ing the year '29 he was elected professor matics and astronomy in the university. In 1846 he resigned his professorship. Dr. Hull contributed nu merous sketches and articles to various vspapers and periodicals. He united mself with the Methodist Episcopal aurch, south, in 1816, and was a leading nember up to the day of his death. He was associated with General Andrew Jackson in concluding the treaty with the Cherokee Indians. He owned a farm near Athens which was neatly arranged. During his long life in Athens he was much belayed and esteemed as a true man, and a gentleman of fine social qualities. To the day of his death his counsels were sought for, and his gentle words of sound judgment deferred to. The gift of Christ, 'peace on earth," was most eminently his, both by nature and grace, and i brought with it the "good will of men."

"Our Brother in Black " volume from the pen of Dr. Atticus G. Haygood, president of Emory college. The book has had but slight preliminary advertisement, but in spite of this we all sections—especially in those sections which we supposed to be politically it will attract attention by its bold and vivid statement of facts that have not heretofore commended themselves to the of its impartial treatment of facts, one side or the other, small for me. been distorted, suppressed or ignored, to suit the humor or the supposed necessities of politics. In some respects, Dr. Haygood's book is a unique contribution to the permanent political literature of the period—using most significant sense. It is discussion of a somewhat elevated sort, since it seeks to uncover every fact of the situation, bad or indifferent, which has either a direct or remote bearing upon the present and future of the negro race in the south. The tone of the book is too earnest and sensitive (if we may use the word) to be judicial, but facts are stated and discussed with an impartiality so absolute that it cannot fail to make an impression even upon those who have no real knowledge of the conditions which resulted from emancipation and the attempted reconstruction of the radicals. Some of the facts stated by Dr. Haygood will not be palatable to the prejudices. These he approaches some-

The international monetary conference which is always in arms, and which is quick to resent even friendly criticism. It is not only quick to resent, but it is quick to misunderstand and misinterpret; and the secret of it all is that the isolation which was one of the necessities of our peculiar institution naturally led us to view the outlying regions and their inhabitants as hostile and alien.

Dr. Haygood is of the opinion—so huge does the projection of prejudice appear to him—that even the historian a century hence may offend some of our descendants, but this is not worth inquiring into. The Constitution has been the pioneer in coaxing and breaking down the lingering prejudices of the past, so far as Georgia is concerned, and with such substantial results that we are almost prepared to say that the intolerfar as Georgia is concerned, and with such substantial results that we are almost prepared to say that the intolerance which has characterized the public prints and politicians of the south has never been fairly representative of the people. The purpose of Dr. Haygood's book will receive the warm approval of those in the south whose approval is those in the south whose approval is a same as a season of the resident.

book will receive the warm approval of those in the south whose approval is worth gaining: there will be few to dispute his arguments; and none to question his facts.

The truth is, the book is a perfectly sincere review of the situation in the south since the surrender at Appomatox, with a clear insight into all its phases and modifications. "Our Brother in Black" is a companion picture to "The Fool's "Errand," and those who have read the latter work (which The Constitution of the young men of the south when it appears to the south the young men of the south when it appeared), cannot have other than a one sided idea of the situation as it was and is until they have also read and digested is until they have also read and digested Dr. Haygood's volume.

We have not space here and now to review the book; this must be deferred to another day; but we commend it to the serious consideration of those at the north who are anxious to have an inside view of the race problem at the south. It goes to the very kernel of affairs, and in this respect, it will undoubtedly take its place as the most remarkable contribution that has yet been made to contemporaneous American history. The volume is published by Pnillips & Hunt, New York, and Walden and Stowe, Cincinnati, and we presume it is for sale at the book stores.

Mahone, who came up like a rocket, will now proceed to go down like a stick. His career has been brief, but brilliant. He gave a democratic senate into the hands of its enemies. He accomplished a bargain with the republican party whose purpose it was to exalt treason and make the repudiation of debts nonorable. He proposed by selling himself for a certain amount in offices, and through them for cash, to break up the solid south; to led the debt-paying democratic party from the error of their ways, to strengthen the republican party where it was most weak, and in various ways to create a great change. The plan has falled. The scheme is broken up, and the seller has not received his pay. The moral influence to be exerted by the senate on the state of Virginia in her coming election has passed away. Georgia-Grown Tea

Georgia-Grown Tea.

Springfield Republican.

Commissioner Le Duc has been exhibiting samples of tea grown in Georgia, and experts in New York consider it equal to the best brands grown in India. This means that the Georgia tea is coarse and of a strong flavor, probably too strong to suit the American palate. The India tea is, and, while the production and the export to England steadily increases, little or none of the product comes here. Aside from the difficulty of finding cheap labor to prepare the leaf, it will probably be found that tea grown in this country, like the teas grown at nearly all points outside of China, lacks the finer flavors of the Chinese leaf.

—The case of Stearns K Abbott, as to which Wendell Philips Jately wrote a characteristically caustic letter to the governor of Massachusetts, seems likely to illustrate the untrustworthiness of circumstantial evidence. Mrs Crue was found murdered in her house at Groton. Abbott, a worthless tramp, had been seen in the neighborhood. On being arrested in the next town he denied having been at the Crue place, but this was clearly shown to be a lie, for he had been there at about the time of the murder. Not much else was a lie, for he had been there at about the time of the murder. Not much else was proved against him in the trial, exceptsome points sworn to by a girl who now contesses herself a perjurer; but his defense was not vigorous, and he was sentenced to be hanged. The rapidity with which fortunes may be won and lost and won again has been remarkably illustrated by Jay Cooke. When he had completed his agency for the sale of United States bonds, and before he had overloaded himself with the North Pacific railroad enterprise, he ranked amming the nullionaires. In 1873 his collogical fortune appeared to tumble as if it we early ruined. Eight years have not yet elapsed, but we find him, able to bid in his country seat, Ogoniz, near Philadelphia, for $113 500, and that he is going to live there once more. The North Pacific railroad is moving on to completion, and will, no doubt, prove a paying enterprise to those who held on to the investments, at one time worth only a few cents on the dollar.

Swift's S. Specific is a vegetable preparation made from roots gathered from the forests of Georgia, and is not offered to the public as a triumph of science, but as a restoration from God to man. This medicine has been used in a certain locality in Georgia ever since the retirement of the Creek Indians from the locality in Georgia ever since the retirement 6:25 pm ment of the Creek Indians from the state. It was communicated by these Indians to the white settlers, and has cured thousands of the worst cases of the disease. We say to the sufferer—take it—and it will relieve you. It will thoroughly remove alltaint of the disease from your system, and will bring back to you your health and happiness. Begin with the usual dose of two tablespoonsful three times a day, and increase the dose to two or three times that quantity, or until it causes an eruption. Take it strictly according to directions, and it strictly according to directions, and it will cure you sound and well. Call on your druggist for a copy of a little book called The Young Men's Friend, and read it. If he cannot furnish it, send to us and we will mail it to you free.

FEDERAL POLITICS. The Soft Pinces in the Army-The Col ored Men in Politics.

Special Correspondence Constitution.

Washington, May 12.—Secretary Linc has begun a laudable effort at reform in the army. He does not believe in the system of dead-beating which has been allowed to favorites, while other officers have borne favorites, while other officers have come the brunt of service. These lucky fellows, known as "ooburgers," are neatly ensooneed in Washington or packed away in some cosy retrest, retaining all the while their regimental position with every chance of promotion, but without sharing the fate of their fellow-officers when it might prove hard.

their Yeilow-omeers when it might prove hard.

This evil has done great injury to the army, and has been made the subject of repeated complaint. But there seems to have been no sincere effort at its correction until Mr. Lincoln took hold of it. Of his success there is grave doubt, especially since has failed signally in one case which hught to have been made an example. The accretary of war cannot correct such an abuse by his own unaided efforts. He has little active support, while against his efforts are arrayed powerful influences at the captal.

— Senator Kellogg's resolution requirithe heads of the departments to submit complete list of all their employes with the tates they represent, looks to another return which is worthy of a better source to was strongly suggested in of Governor Brown's recent peeches in which he declared that there men in government positions here peeches in which he declared that there e men in government positions here laiming to be from southern states they ever saw. The representatives of these tates have a right to ask that the quota o laces allowed their constituency shall be airly filled and not parcelled out to proviscuous office-seekers who are willing to am any home that offers the best chance fossition.

If the lists are honestly made out here will be more material for reform by the next session of congress.

Georgia, for instance, has nothing like her proportion of places, counting all the names attributed to her, and of these I would not be surprised if as many as one fourth were not bons fide residents of the state.

These two references to civil and military service give some idea of the manner in which affairs are conducted in Washington. There can never be any conception of the fraud in all the departments until a change in their political control can occur. Once in a while some shameful scheme, like that of the star routes, bulges out by the power of its own enormity, but it is to the interest of the party in power to suppress all that discredits its administration, and thousands of minor abuses are concealed even if they are strangled. A clearing out of these oil nests would be useful if not pleasant. The records of the departments for the past ten years would afford a good deal of "unwritten history." As long as a general purification by disinterested reformers remains impossible, it is refreshing to see such a movement as that Mr. Lincoln has been un and that Governor.

Altogether there is little in the cotton situation o call for much comment; the cheapness of the rice, especially for the lower grades, gives olders a certain amount of confidence, but the ague feeling of unimited cotton supply that soms in the future checks the spirit of specula-ion, and makes it difficult to see where any ecided rally is to come from.

A Burst of Speed from Bonner's Edwin Forrest.

New York, May 13.—Robert Bonner's famous hay gelding, Edwin Forrest, driven by John Murphy, gave an exhibition of speed in Fleetwood park. A ripple of applause rang along the club house as he was recognized, and the gallant gelding carried his bead high up, as though conscious of the admiration he was receiving. He was officen to a top wagon, weighing with the was officen to a top wagon, weighing with the was officen to a top wagon, weighing with the was officen to a state of the constant of the scale to the scare and Marph modeled for the word. Away went the gelding the model to quarter in 33% seconds. The backstretch now lay before him, and he increased his pace perceptibly. He made the second quarter in 33% seconds completing the half mile in 1:06%. For rest was then taken to the barn and rubbed down. When he came out again he started without any preliminary driving, and when the word was given be went down the course at a high speed. The quarter was made in 33%, and the half mile in 1:11. The enthusiasm began to rise as he continued his wonderful speed to the third quarter. The last quarter was before him, but he showed no signs of quitting, and wante tearing down the home stretch, and the next instant flew under the wire in 2:23% for the mile. ou have thought, you may ascertain that the

New York—The general cotton market has been subject to very little change this week, a quiet and steady tone has characterized the market, though not unfrequently a weak and duil feeling was manifested. The tendency of the market has been to lower prices, but for the week cading to-day the months have sustained losses of only ten to fifteen points. From all the information that can be had there is a large increase of acreage as compared with last year. This fact is having a depressing indiuence on prices, which of late have been steadily declining, and present predictions are that a material shrinkage in values must necessarily take place during the next few months. That the consumptive demand will be requisite to absorb a larger yield than that of the past season contains a reasonable amount of doubt At present the stock of manufactured code have largely over reached the actual demands and are constantly increasing; and, not withstanding the foreign demand for cotton has been such as to rapidly lessen American stocks and thereby make room for the coming crop, it must be borne in mind that Liverpool is carrying a large surplus, which, in the face of a large increased yield of cotton, will, as is reasonable to suppose, result in a fearful downfall of prices in the ultimate future. Of course this early in the season no accurate estimate can be made, and hence all predictions pertaining to a certainty must be deferred to a later day. At the opening this morning futures were steady at higher prices, but the decline during the day placed the closing fluores are steady at higher prices, but the decline during the day laced the closing fluores are steady as thicker prices in the cultimate future. —Self preservation is recognized by all people as a law of the highest obligation, and it is observed in the purchase of goods as well as in other things. We all try to get the best bargains, and this is right. There is no reason why we should go to the store of Mr. A. and pay him a dollar for what can be bought from Mr. B. for fifty cents, unless we wish to do Mr. A. an act of charity. It is well then to get posted as to the place where the best bargains may be secured, and spendour money there. We presume that many have already done this, and decided in favor of W. H. Brotherton, from the crowds that through his store, and who buy so eagerly and liberally from his superb stock. Such as these need no further proof that he is selling the very best bargains that can be had in the city. But for the benefit of those who are not so well posted, we make the following mention of articles and prices:
